There is a good deal of fuss made because the word "obey" occurs in some marriage ceremonies. Why not leave the word out? It is humiliating to women, and cuts no other figure.

WANTED—A CREED

BY AN SIOBHBHRA

Give me a creed that brings Jehovah nearer
The complex facts of life; Give me a creed which makes my brother dearer,
And adds not strife to strife.

A creed which o'er the soul can hold dominion
And issue in content;
Whose confidence is not a vague opinion,
Nor faith a dead assent.

A sign which o'er the waste of speculation,
Will show the surer way;
A light which in the night of desolation
Will light me unto day.

Synods and schools that hedge the way to Heaven
With thorns for tender feet;
Canons and paper creeds for truth have given—
The bitter for the sweet!

Are these the Gospel and the prophet's vision,
The light from Heaven above?
Is this the unfolding of his blessed mission,
Who told us "Thou shalt love?"

Are these the answer to the mute appealing
That rises vague within—An infant's hand into its father's stealing
In terror of its sin?

Or are these words to speak the sweet awakening
Of Hope amid the dust,
When hearts in bitter pain, repentant, breaking,
Can only sob, "I trust?"

No, till words voice the sorrow of the ocean
That sobs all night abroad, Words cannot bound the duty or devotion
Of souls that thirst for God.

Tell me not how the Fathers stride before me
In orthodox shod;
But let me feel the spirit brooding o'er me,
Of glory and of God.
—From the Dublin Nation.
